City helps Mt. Laguna volunteer firefighters

by Lisa Parsons

Three members of the Mt. Laguna Volunteer Fire Department arrived in Lemon Grove Tuesday to pick up their "new" fire truck--the City's surplus 1960 Pirsch fire engine.

The 30-year-old fire engine became surplus when the City of Lemon Grove bought a new fire engine. The Mt. Laguna firefighters wrote to the City Council asking if they could purchase the much-needed truck. After considering several offers from other fire fighting groups, the City decided that the fire engine was most needed and would get the most use by the Mt. Laguna Volunteer Fire Department.

The truck was sold for $5,000, with the understanding that the Mt. Laguna Fire Department would make a down payment of $1,500 and the balance would be paid at the rate of $500 per year, with the payment forgiven in every year the volunteer fire department uses the engine for fire fighting purposes.

The eleven members of the Mt. Laguna Volunteer Fire Department cover a large, mainly recreational area, that has only 60 year-round residents. The new fire truck will be placed at the north end of their coverage area, cutting their 30 minute response time in half.

Lemon Grove Firefighters were on hand to say good-bye along with members of the City Council and Staff. When Mayor Jim Dorman handed Volunteer Firefighter Dennis Sherman the fire engine's ownership papers Sherman said, " I promise you it will be maintained, well used and well loved."

Dorman said "It's been a good truck and we maintain visitation rights."

The happy volunteers said they were planning to officially present the truck to the Mt. Laguna community on June 28th with a ceremony, dinner and dance. The firefighters were anxious to get their new truck home and drove out of the City Hall parking lot waving and smiling. One firefighter joked, "It's a convertible, lets go to the beach."

State distributes highway taxes

State Controller Gray Davis announced the distribution of $110,691,301 among the State, cities and counties as the April apportionment of highway users taxes. San Diego County's share was $2,064,957, and the City of Lemon Grove's share was $26,341.

A total of $27,494,774 went directly to the counties; $26,466,123 to cities; $56,700,404 for expenditure on state highways, and $30,000 to the Bicycle Lane Account.

The total apportionment was derived from the following sources: gasoline tax, $98,128,468; diesel fuel tax, $12,599,021; miscellaneous, $3,812. The total available for the April apportionment was $2,646,496 less than that for the preceding month. The gasoline tax was $4,483,179 more than last month. The diesel fuel tax was $4,870,216 less than a month ago.

The distribution was $57,139,103 less than that for the same month last year. The April 1990 gasoline tax distribution was $57,038,993 less than that for April 1989. The diesel fuel tax distribution was $100,048 less than last year.

Additional tax distributions announced

State Controller Gray Davis reported the distribution of $72,637,215 to cities and $72,637,215 to counties as the April apportionment of state-collected "in-lieu" motor vehicle license fees.

San Diego County received $6,126,490. and the City of Lemon Grove received $71,583.

The distribution represents the cities' and counties' share of license fees and other revenue deposited in the Motor Vehicle License Fee Account during March.

The State excise tax at the rate of $2 per $100 of market value takes the place of local property tax on motor vehicles. Except for that portion withheld to cover administrative costs, the money is returned to local governments which may use their shares for general purposes.

Half of the distribution went to the cities and half to counties in the proportion that the population of each city or county bears to the population of all the cities or counties in the State. Distribution is based on the 1980 Federal Census as adjusted to reflect new incorporations, annexations, special censuses and State Department of Finance estimates.

Davis also reported distribution of $33,524,869 to the counties (San Diego County's share was $2,827,611) for 18.75% of the March revenue of the Motor Vehicle License Fee Account.

Davis then announced the apportionment among counties, cities and school districts of $2,303,232.27 in trailer coach license fees collected during the month of April.

San Diego County's share was $185,964.66. The largest apportionment was $296,496.41 to Los Angeles County.

The Vehicle License Fee law provides that the license fees paid on all trailer coaches registered in California be apportioned monthly to the counties on the basis of the addresses of the vehicles recorded by the Department of Motor Vehicles.

Each County Auditor than semi-annually distributes the total county apportionment among the county, the city (if the address is within a city) and the school districts in which each trailer is situated.

Distribution is in accordance with a formula prescribed by State law.

$4,007,190 was also distributed to counties and cities as the April apportionment of cigarette tax.

San Diego County received $15,016, and the city of Lemon Grove got $2,718. The 58 counties' share was $545,836 and the cities' share totaled $3,461,355.

This distribution represents 30% of the revenue deposited in the Cigarette Tax Fund during the month of March less the State's administrative costs of $54,350.

Cox recognizes Lemon Grove resident for reaching 25 year plateau with firm

In 1961, San Diego County's first cable company began as Pacific Video in El Cajon. Four years later a young Sharon Konz from Lemon Grove joined the firm which, at the time, had been renamed Mission Cable TV.

Today she works for the same company -- only it's now called Cox Cable San Diego -- and this month she celebrates her 25-year anniversary, the firm's first female to do so and only the third employee to reach the 25 year milestone.

"Has it been 25 years?" she asks. "The company has changed so much over the years it's unbelievable. But it's been fun. It's been easy to work with everyone because they've always tried to do their very best."

Konz is Cox Cable's syndex coordinator, ensuring that complicated federal regulation's governing programming are followed.

She has lived in Lemon Grove her entire life, is married, and has two grown children.

County to hold public meetings on planning, siting and funding of public facilities

East County residents will have opportunities to express their opinions on the County of San Diego's policies on planning, siting and funding of current and future public facilities at two public meetings.

The 7 p.m. meetings will be held July 19, at Jamul-Dulzura Elementary School, 14581 Lyons Valley Road, Jamul, and July 31st at Lakeside Senior Center, 9841 Lindo Lane, Lakeside.

Vital facilities including sewers, roads, fire stations, jails, courts, child care, landfills, schools, health and social services will be discussed. The workshop is one of three designed to solicit suggestions and comments on the draft Public Facility Element of the County General Plan.

The purpose of the Element is to closely tie land use decisions to the availability of public facilities and to provide a comprehensive strategy to ensure the proper planning, and siting of public facilities.

It encourages a regional approach to public facility planning and funding and ensures that community facilities needs ar fully considered in all County actions, said Theresa Cherniak, project manager for the County Department of Planning and Land Use.

On June 6th, the County Board of Supervisors approved the draft Public Facility Element for distribution and a 90-day public review. The County Planning Commission will begin hearings on the document in late September.

In addition to addressing a full range of services which may be impacted by development, the document also includes discussion of the needs for public facilities in unincorporated areas which may be annexed by cities in the future.

Heroes

by Paul Treske

Hero/Heroine: A man or woman admired for his or her achievements and qualities, a mythological or legendary figure of great strength or ability.

Having recently followed the visit to our shores of a truly heroic man, Nelson Mandela, it might be worth some time and a few lines to explore that state we call heroic. Here in the latter part of the 20th century, we have come to lament the lack of heroes. Many of us, especially the young, tend to confuse celebrity with heroism. Thus, we find people naming Michael Jackson, Madonna, or John Wayne as their heroes.

In truth, we might well look to more ordinary people for heroism rather than the famous. Those who walk with world stage today find heroic stature to be a fleeting thing due to the need to produce "now ... not yesterday." They are subjected to television scrutiny so intense that eventually all the warts and imperfections are clear for the world to see and they are slowly denigrated before our eyes. Gorbachev came to America as a mythic hero of sorts, while at home in Russia he is viewed with increasing anger and disdain. Lech Walesa, a giant in Poland's struggle for independence, is already viewed by many in his own party as passe. When John Kennedy stood in Berlin and announced "Ich ben ein Berliner," he was almost godlike, but subsequent revelations have shown him to be an all too frail often irresponsible man. Even Mandela, a true hero in his fight for human rights and survival of an almost interminable prison term, will probably find himself increasingly put upon and tarnished as he wades into the active political arena.

We would be better off to seek heroes closer to home. They are there if we allow ourselves to stop seeking the legendary and mythical and instead look to those whose qualities of quiet strength and shared ability serve as examples of how to treat our fellow human beings. We will not find them among world leaders or movie stars. They are instead our teachers, doctors, wives and husbands. They are those among us who face the trials and pains of living with dignity, compassion, kindness and integrity and serve as bastions of strength for the rest of us who tremble and doubt when life is too threatening. These individuals seldom see themselves as heroic. They are usually too busy dealing with life and helping others to look in the mirror or wait for praise.

No heroes? Of course there are, but try looking in the wings instead of the main stage. In Harper Lee's "To Kill a Mocking Bird" one of the neighbors speaks of the central character Atticus Finch and says ". . . there are some men in this world who were born to do our unpleasant jobs for us."

These men and women, one suspects, are the true heroes.

From Where I Sit

That Bird Was Really Hooked

by Frank Andrews

Sea gulls in the heart of the big city? Sounds impossible, but six or eight of these supposedly seaside birds visit a downtown San Diego meat company about noon every day for lunch. Seems that the hustle and bustle of the city does not deter their craving for a gourmet meal.

One day John Cummins, the proprietor of the wholesale meat company, noticed a couple of the sea gulls outside pecking away at the trash. His love of wildlife prompted him to make a little platform on top of the outside storeroom for the white beauties to feed. Then daily, he would sprinkle fresh ground beef on the platform for his fine feathered friends. John admits, "I would gladly give them filet mignon but the ground meat is so much easier for them to eat."

Recently, as John was watching the birds eat their U.S. Choice luncheon, he noticed one of the birds wasn't eating. Upon closer observation, he saw a hook-clad fishing lure and fishing line caught in the disabled gull's beak.

John's feelings for the handicapped bird, together with his many years of training as a Reserve Captain for the San Diego County Humane Society, sent him into action. John had tackled bigger jobs than this, like rescuing frightened horses from the many area brush fires.

He and one of his employees built a baited box trap next to the feeder on the roof, hoping the hooked sea gull would return with his buddies the next day. At noon John and his man watched and waited. Finally seven gulls showed up and landed on the feeder to start their meal. No maimed bird appeared and John was disheartened after his good intentions. Soon after "The Magnificent Seven" finished and were gone to find their just desserts, the wounded gull appeared and headed right for the trap as all the meat was gone from the platform. He quickly fell for the bait and plop went the box. He was trapped.

John's man retrieved the disabled bird and the two men, with the aid of a pair of side-cutters, rid the poor thing of his cumbersome fishing gear. Now, whenever that grateful creature feeds on ground steak, he will have a little more to be thankful for than the rest of his gang.

Thank God for John Cummins and all the other compassionate people.

It's The Law

by Richard L Boyer, Attorney at Law

Question: I hired a contractor to remodel my house. He was supposed to be done in two months. It has been four months since he began and he is not even close to being finished. What are my rights?

Answer: A variety of factors will influence each case, but generally, if the contractor has agreed to complete his work by a specified date, he will be liable to you for all delay-related damages. Some such damages are easy to prove, such as rent you paid while unable to live in your house. Other damages are more difficult to prove, such as psychological suffering due to the delay. The watch word here is to keep thorough records of all costs you incur due to the contractor's delay.

The best contracts will state that "time is of the essence," and will specify liquidated damages (a fixed amount per day to be charged to the contractor for delays & completion of the work). In those cases, the contractor's liability for delay is limited to the amount specified in the contract. If your contract merely states that the work will be completed by a certain date, without providing that time is of the essence, or specifying liquidated damages, the contractor will still be liable for damages you can prove you incurred due to the delay.

If your contract doesn't specify a time of completion, the law will impose a reasonable time for performance into the contract. For instance, if the reasonable time of construction takes a year, it is clear that the contractor has gone well beyond the reasonable time of construction for a swimming pool and has therefore breached the contract, notwithstanding that the contract does not specify a time of completion. As you might imagine, these cases are more difficult to prove because you will most likely need another contractor to testify that your contractor took an unreasonably long period of time.

If you have to fire your contractor due to his lack of performance or inability to perform, and a subsequent contractor completes the work, you are entitled to recover from the first contractor the amount of the cost overrun. For example, your contract with contractor number one is for $1,000. You fire him for lack of performance and hire contractor number two to finish the work, but your total costs for the work end up being $1,200. You can recover from contractor number one the $200 cost overrun in addition to your other delay-related costs.

The contractor has two weapons in defending delay of performance cases: Excuse and waiver. His delay may be excused if he can prove that the delay was not his fault.

The courts are usually not very sympathetic to contractors who claim that their delay should be excused, and beyond acts of God, most causes for delay are held to be within the contractor's control.

Additionally, a contractor can argue that the delay was waived. Waiver occurs if you, through words, acts, or deeds express to the contractor that you forgive the delay and are willing to pay him in full for his performance. If you intend to pay the contractor for work he performs beyond the completion date, you should send him a letter by registered mail, stating that he is in breach of contract and that payment does not constitute a waiver by you of your rights to restitution for delay-related damages. It is a mistake to suffer in silence in the hope that justice will be done later. Your silence may be seen as a waiver.

Finally, if there is a breach of the contract due to delay of performance, you cannot withhold all money owed to the contractor under your contract. Even if he is slow in fulfilling his obligations, he has a right to the value of the work he has performed subject to a deduction for your delay-related damages. Of course, in the most egregious cases, your damages could exceed the value of the contractor's work.

The best way to avoid problems is to anticipate them beforehand, and agree, in writing, how the parties will handle those problems if they arise while the work is in progress. Remember, the more you do to avoid potential problems before they occur, the more chance you have of avoiding a lawsuit.

San Diego Hosts World's Best Junior Golfers

The international sports spotlight directs its focus on San Diego next week when youngsters from (at press time) 33 nations and 35 states tee off in the 23rd Optimist Junior World Golf Championships.

The largest foreign field in the history of the event was guaranteed last week when the hard working folks at the Junior World offices in Jack Murphy San Diego Stadium received confirmed entries from qualified youngsters representing almost every corner of the world.

Players will represent the golfing hopes of national pride from Australia to Zambia, in a list that includes countries from every continent on earth.

It's small wonder Norrie West keeps the lights burning in his La Mesa home office until the wee hours of the morning, after spending long hours at his desk in the Junior Golf office.

West is the general chairman and tournament director of the Junior World Golf Classic and keeps in almost daily phone and fax contact with junior golf sponsors, players and officials from across the nation and around the world.

West doesn't work alone. No one person can manage such an undertaking. Golf tournaments need an army of executives to get the show on the road and keep things moving in proper order.

Norrie has an army of three. Joan Smith serves as tournament coordinator, Dot Spencer is entry chairman and Mary Kevorkian runs foreign player's housing. They're West's general staff.

There are others, of course. There is no lack of helping hands at tournament sites. San Diego's very generous golfing community plays a big part in having helped the Junior World grow to become a truly major international sporting event.

Donna Abrego is the Head Pro at Presidio Hills, where the 10-under youngsters play. She is a third generation golf pro and there is talk her grandfather, Al Abrego, taught the game to Juan Rodriguez Cabrillo. Maria Falk is the starter for the 10-unders.

Tom Addis and Scott Bently host the 11-12 boys and girls at the Singing Hills Country Club. Audrie Walker is the starter.

La Mesa's Mission Trails Golf Course (a member of the A.G.C. group) is hosting the 13-14 division this year. A.G.C. tourney director Ron Gorski and Head Pro Daryl Driscoll have the course in tournament shape for starter Anne Brainard's worldwide field.

Galleries are not allowed on the course during Junior World play in the three younger age groups. They are allowed to follow players in the 15-17 bracket at Torrey Pines where the girls test the 6659 yard North Course and the boys tackle the 7021 yard South layout. Boys start at both the 1st and 9th tees.

Torrey Pines manager John Walter has both courses in better tournament shape than is possible when the Shearson Lehman Hutton PGA tournament players test the grounds on their winter schedule.

Gloria Meisen is chief starter for the boys, Lena Porter gets them off on the 9th tee. Cordie Jacks and her crew get the girls off on the North Course.

Mary and Betty Cave and Phyllis Huss operate the scoreboard, Marie Jacks is chief marshal, and that ol' "Sports of the Day" guy, Al Couppee comes back as the awards Master of Ceremonies.

It takes lots of folks to stage a world-class sportin' event.

Joe Freed on the Movies

This week's movie: Die Hard 2, Die Harder

I'm so ashamed of myself. All along I thought I was this proud, intellectual, cinema elitist who only cared about quality films...a little David Lynch perhaps, a dash of John Houston, a sample of Francis Ford Coppola. I used to pride myself on my ability to triumphantly spit in the face of flagrant summer commercialism. But now I find myself developing into the kind of critic you'd expect to see on television, running around with a bald head and a pretty sweater screaming "Two thumbs up!" Horrific as it may be, I'm beginning to like a few of those dumb, predictable, summer movies I'm always complaining about. And I loved "Die Hard 2."

Bruce Willis stars in a sequel that is not only more violent and gruesome than its predecessor, it's also more exciting. Director Renny Harlin has created what I honestly believe is a perfect thriller. The action is so enthralling that I was shocked when the two hours were over...I wanted more! It is a bit of a stretch that Willis just happens to be in the middle of a terrorist attack exactly one year after his last adventure, and that his wife again just happens to be one of the potential victims. I can look beyond that because "Die Hard 2" is meant to be a filmic roller-coaster; it comes off more like an entire amusement park. George Lucas' Industrial Light and Magic provided some incredible visual effects, from crashing planes to exploding planes...enough firepower to ensure this flick won't be seen on any in-flight movies. It's a frequent flier's nightmare.

The film's intensity can also be attributed to a decent, if somewhat predictable, plot based on Walter Wager's novel "58 Minutes." The fact that the screenplay, by Steven de Souza and Doug Richardson, is based on a novel and wasn't just a bunch of explosions thrown together in time for the summer crowds (like the dud "Robocop 2"), lends the entire project a little credibility. Not much, but enough to keep a few of the cynics happy.

Willis does well as the adventurous hero, although I think he fires his machine gun more than he speaks, and he has a strong supporting case including William Atherton, John Amos and Bonnie Bedelia, as the wife in distress. Every character in the film is either in trouble or making it, but despite their dire circumstances you can tell all the actors were having a good time.

When you see "Die Hard 2," (I say when instead of if, because it's your duty as a filmgoer to enjoy yourself and this film will do the trick) make sure you go to a theatre that has Lucasfilm's THX stereo sound system. The commercials that say "Die Hard 2" will blow you out of the theatre are definitely true.

Make*A*Circus coming to La Mesita Park

Patricia Howard, Mark Sackett and Dan Mankin compete for the "coolest" move in the 1990 Make*A*Circus show, "The Mouth That Roared."

Children of all ages will have a chance to run away with the circus (for a day) when San Francisco's oldest free-in-the-parks circus theatre, Make*A*Circus, presents a free public performance Tuesday, July 24th, 5:00 p.m., La Mesita Park, 8855 Dallas Street in La Mesa, sponsored by the ARCO Foundation.

This year's show is titled "The Mouth That Roared," and tells the story of a hilarious bunch of students trying to out-flip, out-juggle, out-clown and out-tumble each other in competition for the "Crown of Coolness" bestowed by the town's most popular D.J., Big Mouth. The cast features the return of vaudeville/theatre troupe Vaudeville Nouveau members Mark Sackett and Dan Mankin, members of the first Make*A*Circus company 16 years ago. Free workshops follow the main show, with lessons in juggling, clowning, stiltwalking and acrobatics, after which the youngsters showcase their new skills in their own special show, "Feelers," to the laughter and proud applause of family and friends.

Admission is free to all Make*A*Circus events, which are presented throughout the summer in parks throughout California. For further information about Make*A*Circus touring schedules and other programs, call 415/776-8477.

ECPAC turns a profit

After years of red ink, the East County Performing Arts Center (ECPAC) finished the fiscal year in the black. At a meeting of the Grossmont-Cuyamaca College District Board of Trustees (owners of ECPAC), ECPAC manager Dick Childs told the Board that a profit of $3,479 was turned and an endowment of $92,000 was developed.

Childs, who has a background in financial management, was hired last year to move the East County theater into fiscal self-reliance. Under Childs, ECPAC has not only turned its first profit, but also instigated safety improvements and almost $400,000 in building and equipment repairs. The theatre was busy bringing the community entertainment more than 250 nights last year.

"With this year of consolidation and development behind us," Childs said, "the concentration for the coming year will be on additional programs and events which will appeal to a broader group of patrons."

East County students awarded art scholarships by Foothills artists

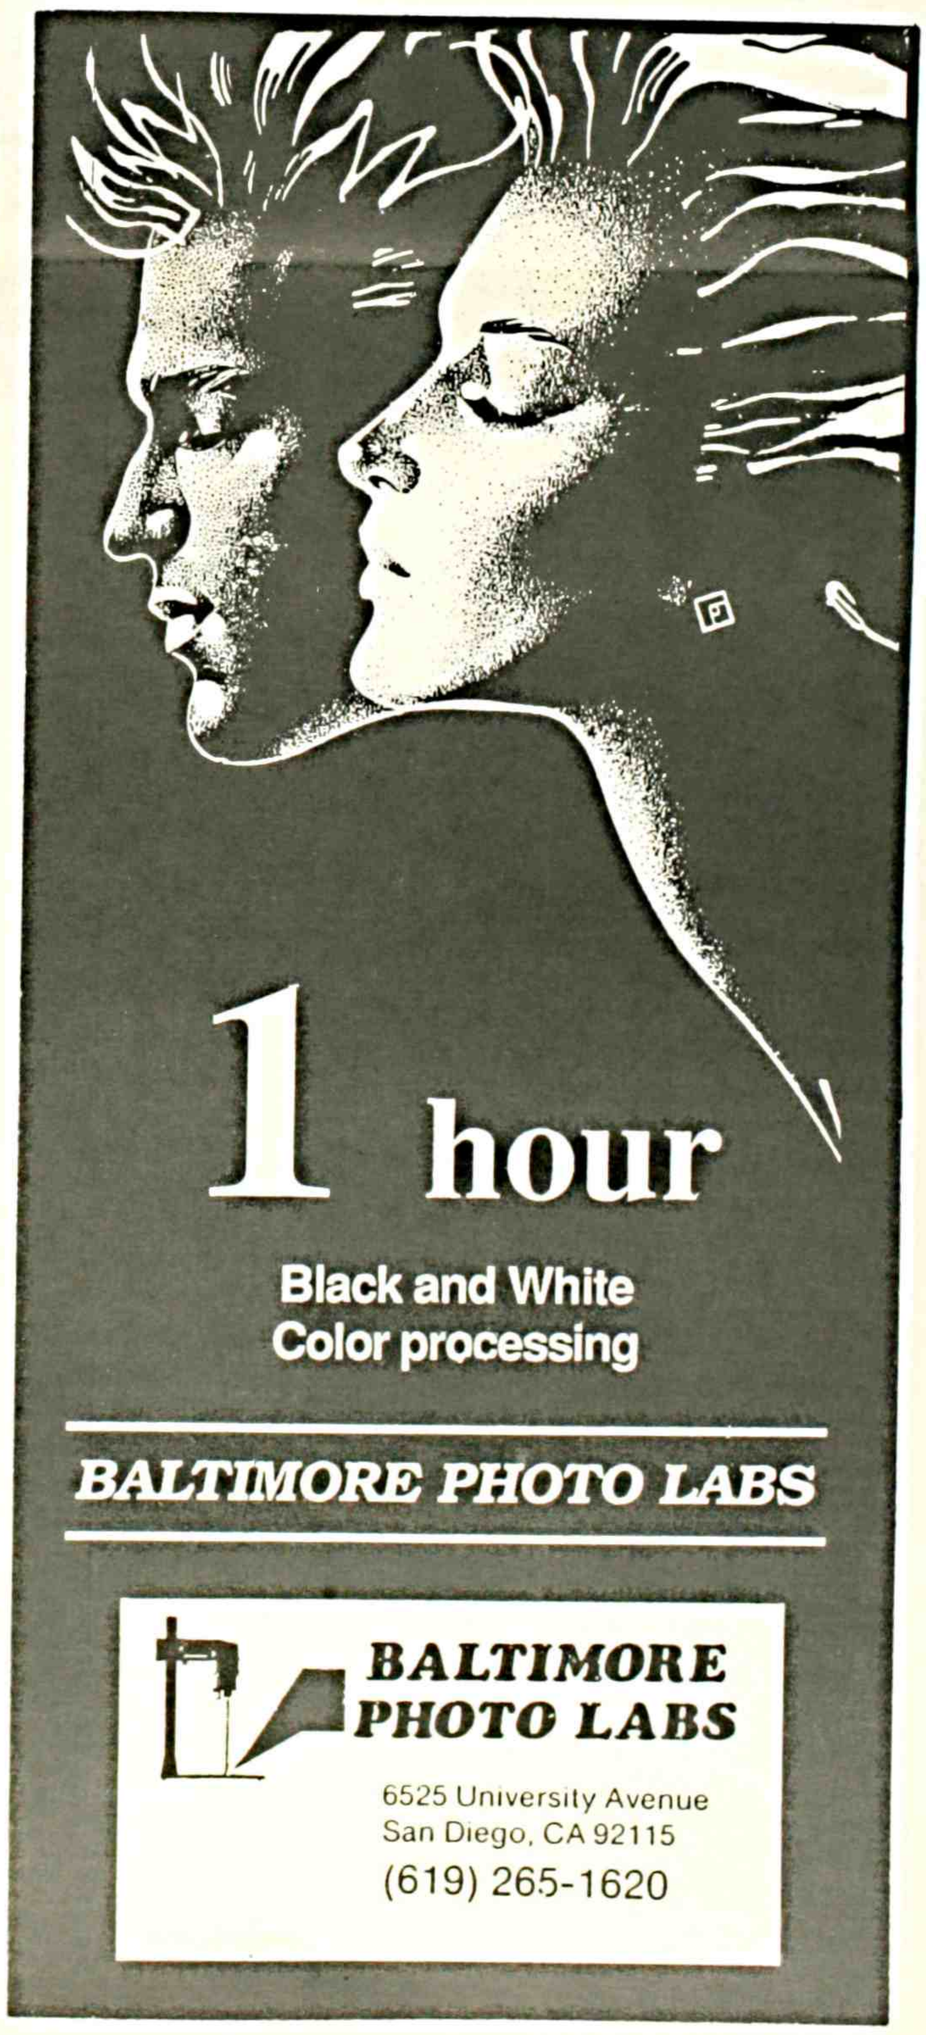

At Foothills Art Association's regular June meeting two scholarships were awarded to East County high school grads.

Milton Brown, a Helix student, was awarded $200 to further his study of architecture at Stanford University. Selected as the most promising artist at Helix, he received distinction as Graphic Artist of the Year from his school. Brown also was a competitor in hurdles and received a Marine Corps Award in track. He taught Arts and Crafts at Foothills Recreation Center.

Jennifer Roppe, a Grossmont student, received $200 to further her studies at the University of San Diego. Roppe also received school awards in math and biology, subjects she intends to pursue at U.S.D. She will follow her art career as a minor. Roppe also was active as a teacher of Arts and Crafts at Foothills Recreation Center.

These students' works will be on display at Foothills Gallery during the month of July. The Gallery is open Tuesday through Saturday from 11 a.m. until 4 p.m. It is located adjacent to the La Mesa Public Library at 8051 University Avenue between Allison and Baltimore.

Also during July, members of Foothills will submit a work not previously viewed for judging by votes of the public.

Grossmont Hospital uses rare procedure to place baby back in womb

Two-week old Denise Americano almost didn't make it from conception to her mother's arms. She literally dropped out of Maria Americano's uterus during her 23rd week of development. But a complicated and rarely-done surgical technique, called "heroic cerclage," saved Denise's life.

Thomas Key, M.D., chief of perinatology at Grossmont Hospital, performed the delicate procedure, which involved placing Denise back into her mother's womb and surgically closing the cervix. This, combined with 46 days in bed in the antepartum unit at the Women's Health Center at Grossmont Hospital, enabled Maria to carry Denise until she had developed enough to be delivered safety. At four-pounds, 12-ounces; a small but healthy Denise was delivered by planned caesarean section on June 18, 1990.

Key explained that Maria's cervix simply was not strong enough to hold the weight of a developing fetus. He said she previously had lost two babies because of this problem.

Key said Denise already had partially dropped out of Maria's uterus when they were flown to Grossmont Hospital from Brawley, where Maria lives with her husband, Tomas.

"Maria is a courageous woman; a real fighter," said Key. "The chances were a million-to-one that we could save this baby." Key said advances in medical technology have helped other women like Maria to have healthy babies.

"This is why prenatal care is so important, especially for high-risk mothers. Early identification of potential problems can increase the chances for a happy outcome," he said.

In a recent telephone conversation, Maria proudly stated that Denise had gained one-half pound and the family is doing well. "I'm so happy to have my baby," she said.

Project Wildlife Run & Walk

There will be a wildlife celebration for runners and walkers on Sunday, July 15, 1990. The Fourth Annual San Diego Wildlife Run & Walk will be held in beautiful Balboa Park. The 2 Mile Run or Walk will start at 7:10 a.m., and the 10K Run or Walk will start at 7:30 a.m.

Just for being a part of this event, all participants will receive a distinctive animal collage tee shirt and many other items.

Team competition will be featured. Teams may register in either the Corporate or Military Division.

Prizes will be awarded for the best entrants' "Wildlife" costumes, and a drawing will be held to give away prizes.

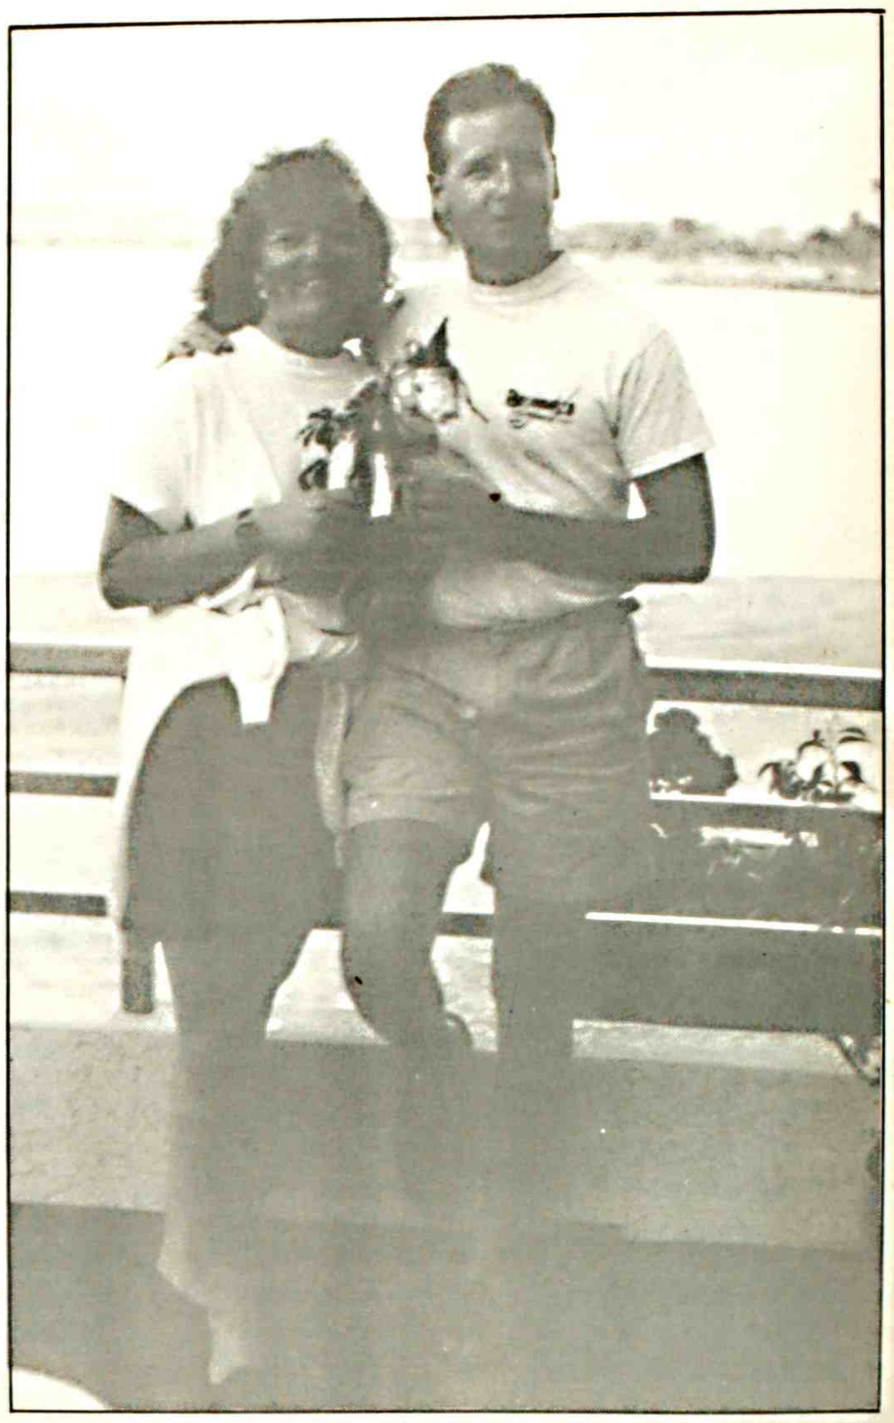

This wildlife celebration benefits Project Wildlife, a non-profit volunteer organization, which is dedicated to the rescue, rehabilitation, and release of San Diego County's native wild animals. Each year Project Wildlife gives a second chance to between 3,000 and 5,500 native wildlife.

Entry forms can be picked up at most athletic stores or by calling 236-0842.

There will be day-of-event registration in Balboa Park at the corner of President's Way and the Pan American Plaza between 5:45 a.m. and 7:10 a.m.

For more information, call 236-0842 or 437-4667.

Support this wild and wooly Run & Walk, and give wildlife a second chance.

Space Theater to celebrate anniversary of moon landing

To commemorate that momentous occasion, when Neil Armstrong became the first man to set foot on the moon, July 20, 1969, the Reuben H. Fleet Space Theater & Science Center will celebrate National Spaceweek with a variety of free lectures and special events during the week of July 14-20. This year's theme is "The Moon, Mars and Beyond... a Journey into Tomorrow."

Headlining the list of speakers is astronaut John Young, the world's most experienced space traveler. Among his accomplishments are two trips to the moon and command of the first flight of Space Shuttle Columbia. Young has spent a total of 835 hours in space and currently serves as special assistant to the director of Johnson Space Center for Engineering, Operations and Safety. Young will be speaking about his experience in space and about the future of space exploration on Friday, July 20, at 6:30 p.m. in the Space Theater. Young's presentation is sponsored by General Dynamics Space System Division.

Several other new and exciting programs are planned during Spaceweek. They include:

"Moonwalk," a fun, inflatable exhibit for kids, will be set up in front of the Fleet Center building on Saturday, July 14, and Sunday, July 15th. "Sunwatch," with staff astronomer Dennis Mammana, will take place daily, July 16-20, from noon to 1:00 p.m.

On Tuesday, July 17 and Thursday, July 19, from 10:30 a.m. to 11:30 a.m. the Space Theater will offer a special program especially for families. You and your family are invited to experience some of the aspects of space travel and space living in a "how-to" presentation. Learn to conduct activities which recreate a shuttle mission for your family. This presentation is great for families with children eight years old and older.

Take a "Walk through the Solar System" in a scale model of the solar system stretching across Balboa Park. Tour guides are available to help you discover first-hand the distances, sizes and remarkable features of each planet. Meet your tour guide at the Space Theater's lecture hall on Saturday, July 14, at 11:00 a.m., 12:30 p.m., 2:00 p.m. and 3:30 p.m. "Walk through the Solar System" displays are made possible through a grant from Joor Manufacturing, Inc.

Join Fleet Center astronomer Dennis Mammana under the giant Space Theater dome for a tour of the stars, constellations and planets visible from San Diego in a live sky show. After the show, view the wonders of the real sky through telescopes set up by the Fleet Center and the San Diego Astronomy Association. This program begins at 7:00 p.m. on Tuesday, July 17th.

Other related activities include a return of two space shuttle OMNIMAX films: "Hail Columbia," featuring astronaut John Young, and the ever popular "The Dream Is Alive."

During Spaceweek, tickets for "Hail Columbia" and "The Dream Is Alive" will be discounted 20% off the regular price with the coupon off the back of the Spaceweek brochure.

The entire Spaceweek program was made possible by a grant from General Instrument Corporation, VideoCipher Division, a San Diego leader in satellite and radio electronics, power semiconductors and cable home communications.

Each program is approximately one hour in length. Seating is on the first-come, first-served basis. For a complete schedule of events, call the Space Theater's education department at (619) 238-1233, ext. 208/247.

The Reuben H. Fleet Space Theater & Science Center is operated by the San Diego Space & Science Foundation, a nonprofit organization dedicated to improving the public's understanding and appreciation of science and technology.
